Woman's Beauty No Secret

It lies in the care she takes, expelling from the system the poisonous impurities which cause the terrible chronic diseases peculiar to women. The aches, pains, blues, nervous headaches, loss of sleep and appetite, sallow complexion, etc., which accompany all female troubles are caused by kidney poison and a failure of the delicate organs of womanhood to perform their natural function. As a certain remedy for diseases peculiar to females and for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder, Wintemuth's Buchu has had thirty years' success. If you would avoid many of the troubles of women use

RATS LIVED IN LUXURY.

Their Nests Composed of Bank Notes Taken from the Till.

The pleasure that a rat takes in stealing has never been accurately estimated. Discretion or discrimination on the part of the rat is absolutely unknown, but the rats in John Carberry's barroom, at Atlantic and Rockaway avenues, showed remarkable taste in the articles that they selected to carry away. Mr. Carberry had been in business for nearly six years, and has lived on Ocean hill for a quarter of a century. For the last two or three years money has mysteriously disappeared from the cash drawer. Both Mr. Carberry and his bartenders were utterly unable to account for this disappearance. A vague idea that a second Hermann was circulating about the premises and extracting money from the till by sleight of hand performance led them to keep a particularly careful watch in the endeavor to discover the thief.

One night in March, 1892, "Mike" Carlton, the bartender, was in charge of the place. He had three one dollar bills, which he placed in the drawer. Several men, habitués of the place, were leaning up against the cash opposite the bar, and several others were playing cards, and when he came back and again opened the till the bills had disappeared. Thinking that it was a joke put up on him by some of the barroom wags, he asked that the money be returned before he made up his cash account that night. When the time came the bills were still missing. Time and again the same sudden disappearance and astonishment and regret have been experienced, but, unlike the cat of blessed memory, the bills returned not. Carberry himself missed $25 one night. He counted his money over and over again, endeavoring to persuade himself that a one dollar bill was a "ten spot" in order to make the account square, but his imagination failed.

This sort of thing went on until a few weeks ago, when Carberry put a two dollar bill in the drawer. He turned away for a few moments, and upon again opening the drawer the bill was nowhere to be seen. This was too much. The sudden disappearance and the fact that no one had been behind the bar but himself led him to think that the depredations must have been committed by four footed enemies, and a search was instituted. Several nests of rats were found. Some of the bills had been gnawed beyond all possibility of ever discovering their denomination, but much of the money was comparatively uninjured. A large roll of the mutilated greenbacks was sent to the bank where Mr. Carberry keeps his account, and there redeemed. But many of the bills are much better suited to the needs of the rat than anything else. Just how much money was carried off by the rats could not be ascertained, but that it amounted to several hundred dollars is undeniable. At present Carberry keeps his paper money on top of the bar, where a careful watch can be kept on it.—N. Y. Tribune.

HE OWNS 35,000 DOGS.

The Sheep King of Russia Has Need of Them.

Gustave Javanovitch has a fondness for dogs, says the New York World. He has altogether 35,000 of the animals. That ought to prove the case. Javanovitch is not, however, insane or a monomaniac on the subject of canines. In addition to his tremendous kennels he has the largest herd of sheep in the world. When his flocks are all rounded up at shearing time the figures show that Gustave has 1,500,000 bleating lambs and butting rams. It is because of the sheep he owns the dogs.

Javanovitch is the sheep king of Russia. On the lower plateaus or steppes of the lower country he has thousands of acres of land. Men are needed, of course, to see to the comfort and well-being of the animals, but it would require a good-sized army of employees to look after 1,500,000 sheep.

Nearly all of Javanovitch's sheep dogs are Scotch collies. The shepherds of Scotland have used them for centuries in caring for their flocks. When Javanovitch started the nucleus for his immense establishment he imported 50 of the dogs from Scotland. Under careful coaching they developed the traits of their canine ancestors and now care for the flocks as well if not better than an unlimited number of men could do it. The great flocks of sheep on the Russian plains are wolves.

A Missouri Curiosity.

In Nevada, Mo., a young catalpa tree, about 20 feet tall, is growing with a section of a coal-stove grate firmly attached near its roots. The tree has grown through the bars of the grate from the seed, and, as it increased in diameter, the wood lapped over and under the bars, holding it as in a vise. The grate was lifted off the ground several inches as the growth of the tree progressed.

A POLYGLOT CAR LINE.

All Nations and All Tongues Represented in a Bowery Cable Car.

"If I had the naming," said a jolly conductor on a Third avenue cable car to a New York World reporter, "I'd certainly christen this the International line, or the Tower of Babel line, or the Many Nations railroad. Just look at my happy family inside. There's the old lady in the corner who has had a drop too much, and insists on talking to herself much louder than is necessary. It does not need an emerald gown to tell what country she belongs to."

"Next on the seat to her are two 'daggo' dames, as you can plainly see, with gay-colored cloths on their heads and their black eyes rolling as they swap gossip of Mulberry street. Next to them sits Mr. John, who's on his way to Chatham square for his pipe and groceries, and beyond is a Russian Jew and a 'Polack,' quite oblivious to the fact that they are supposed to be deadly enemies."

"On the other side there's a 'Johnny Bull' and four Hebrews—Hungarians, I should say at a guess, another Italian and a 'coon.' You, I take it, are an American. My name is MacPherson, which means that I'm Scotch, and my gripman at the other side is an Alsatian named Deillac, or something like that. He is a talented French cook, he tells me, and has seen the inside of some fine kitchens in his day, but he has reasons for taking up with a cooler job, which, I suppose, are neither my business nor yours. It's funny that we haven't a German on board, but I dropped one just before you got on, and there is another nationality missing of which we usually have a simple—plain Bowery."

GLADSTONE'S OLD AGE.

It is a Beautiful Example—Always Busy and Interested.

Mr. Gladstone, in the evening of his life, is busied as few men are, but he never loses his capacity for work or lags in the task of keeping abreast of the topics of the time, says the New York World. After six hours spent in editing Butler's "Analogy," the work on which he is now engaged, he is willing and eager to talk at the luncheon table on anything but politics. Newspapers he not only reads but criticises and compares.

If the subject of conversation happens to be a newly created peer there is poured forth a flood of recollection and perhaps a quietly witty saying, such as: "I could tell you ever so much more. But I don't want you to get me into a libel action." Books are his favorite topic, and his latest friends are "Robinson Crusoe" and the "Arabian Nights." Miss Edgeworth has also received attention. The three latest books to occupy him have been "Aunt Anne," "A Flash of Summer" and Sir W. Hunter's "Old Missionary."

The 11 o'clock service in the Haverdham chapel always sees Mr. Gladstone now. He used to attend the 8 o'clock service, but his physicians forbade this on account of his eyesight. He listens to every word with the keenest attention, and if the pose seems to convey the idea that he is deaf it is a mistake.

Mr. Gladstone is known to have the tenderest regard for his wife, and neither work nor amusement occupies his mind if she is the least bit ill.

Key West.

The present population of Key West, according to the estimate of the mayor, is 15,000, almost equally divided into three parts—5,000 white Cubans, 5,000 white Bahamians and 5,000 colored Cubans and Bahamians. This estimate leaves no room for Americans; and the real Americans on the island number only eight or ten families. Although most of the adult male residents have been naturalized, they can scarcely be considered American citizens in the broad sense of the term, having no personal knowledge of any part of the republic but the tiny island of Key West, and clinging tenaciously to the peculiar customs of Cuba and the Bahamas.

Happy When She Had Enough.

We once knew a woman, an inmate of a county infirmary, who attained the ripe age of 106 years who had always been an inveterate user of tobacco, which owing to her poverty was a luxury not easily obtained. To economize in its use, she first chewed the plug and dried the quids, from which she made a tea and drank of it freely, then the residue was carefully redried for consumption in her pipe. The old lady proudly affirmed that she had never been ill.—Cleveland Medical Gazette.

Calf's Brains.

Wash thoroughly in cold water, removing all blood and strings; parboil ten minutes; cut in eight pieces, dip in beaten egg, then flour, pepper and salt; fry in butter. Take out and keep warm, add a little water to the butter they were fried in and a very little browned flour; add finely-chopped parsley and pour over the brains. Garnish with slices of lemon.—N. Y. Ledger.
